Edmonton high schools could pilot streamlined crime prevention program

By: Stephanie Dubois Metro Published on Wed Dec 18 2013

Two Edmonton schools could have a more-streamlined reporting of crimes at school-level if a new pilot program is approved.

Students Speaking Out (SSO) would allow for high school students at Archbishop O’Leary and Queen Elizabeth to report any crime anonymously by calling CrimeStoppers more seamlessly.

After a CrimeStoppers crime is reported by a student, it would then be relayed along to the school’s student resource officer.

New fund created to help communities target crime

$60 million fund marks next phase of Alberta’s Safe Communities initiative

Edmonton... On the one-year anniversary of Alberta’s Safe Communities initiative, the province created a new $60 million fund to strengthen and develop community-based projects. The funding will support community-police partnership projects - marking the next phase of the strategy.
